G3 Cluster

The “G3 Cluster” (Gender, Gerontology, and Geography) is designed to support the formation and work of a research team towards the submission of a proposal for health research funding.

More specifically the purpose of the G3 Cluster is to:

- bring together researchers (community and academic), students, and service providers to examine the intersections of Gender, Gerontology, and Geography in relation to “transitions” in and between the health care system;
- support the development of a research proposal for external funding;
- support and sustain a research culture focused on the interconnections between gender, gerontology, and geography in relation to health care, health outcomes, and other health determinants.

Why join the G3 cluster?

- Meet others interested in discussing the interconnections between gender, gerontology, and geography in the context of health care “transitions”;
- Expand program of research and meet potential new collaborators;
- Receive support for the development of a grant proposal. This may include, but is not limited to: technology for meeting virtually (WebEx), meeting and workshop expenses, travel expenses, administrative support for meeting management, and so on.

The G3 Cluster will be of particular interest to people who have expertise or interest in gender and health, gerontology and the health care system, and / or geography and other factors related to place and location. Cluster members may only have one of the areas of expertise but may wish to expand knowledge by linking with others in academia and the community. Individuals involved in the cluster may have academic positions, work in the community as service providers or researchers, or be individuals interested in the topic.

Please send CV and cover letter, outlining the contribution you would to the G3 cluster by Friday January 30, 2009, to:
